Californians, on the whole, don't eat breakfast — and that isn't "eggs-actly" great news for the state's egg industry.

Robert Pierre of Upland is trying to change the image of the egg. In his role as the president of the California Egg Commission, Pierre is determined to get more people to eat eggs any time during the day.

"The purpose of the commission is to advertise, promote and conduct an education program about the per capita consumption of eggs," Pierre said.

Concerns about the decrease in egg consumption caused statewide producers to approach Assemblyman Dave Kelly of Hemet to sponsor a bill creating the California Egg Commission. His fellow legislators agreed.

Assembly Bill No. 4036, passed earlier this year, and the commission's office was established on Mountain Avenue in Upland.

The commission replaced the old California Egg Marketing & Research Agreement, which was formed in 1976. The commission operates with the concurrence of the state Department of Agriculture.

Commission directors agreed to establish a 30-cents-per-case-of-eggs assessment. The rate will generate $5 million the commission can use for advertising geared toward increasing egg consumption.

Since two-thirds of the state's total egg production, about 8.2 billion eggs per year comes from San Bernardino and Riverside counties, Upland seemed a logical place to base the organization, Pierre said.

Although the city doesn't have any egg ranches, neighboring Ontario, Rancho Cucamonga, Alta Loma and Chino do.

"Farmers need all the help they can get. We need someone to speak for the industry," Bill Houtz said.

Houtz' family has operated the Houtz egg ranch in Alta Loma for 32 years.

"The egg commission helps because it provides the advertising the industry needs. All farmers pay the commission for the service," Houtz said.

This area once had thousands of chicken farmers but that number has dwindled, he said.

Anna Stepanian, former owner of the Ontario Egg Ranch, said the "market is high but producers are suffering."

Local ranches help make egg production the 11th largest agricultural entity in California, bigger than lettuce and navel oranges.

The average consumption of eggs is drastically down from the days when the average person ate 300 each year, he said.

"We don't think the controversy about cholesterol is the entire thing. Research shows that the average lifestyle of people in California and the country has changed. More and more people just aren't eating breakfast," Pierre said.

"We have had a terrible attack by the media on the industry without any solid, concrete information about cholesterol. There is very little we can do to defend ourselves with so little knowledge," he said.

The egg organization established the ad campaigns "Make Monday omelette night" and "Eggs Aren't Just For Breakfast Anymore."

In addition, Pierre has overseen a program geared toward putting food pages in newspapers which concentrate more on eggs; that will educate people about the benefits of eating eggs; and will install 493 billboards in this state and Arizona promoting what the industry terms the "Incredible Edible Egg."

The commission has distributed 2.5 million egg recipe books in stores throughout the state, in both English and Spanish. □

Robert Pierre (left) has taken over the reins of the California Egg Commission this year. He heads the group whose purpose is to promote the consumption of eggs. A single egg (far left) has about 80 calories and is loaded with numerous vitamins and nutrients. Pierre said eggs are very versatile because they can be boiled, poached, fried and baked. If a person adds a little imagination to a recipe, there's no limitation to what he can whip up. On the cover: Lupe Sanchez works at the 6M Ranch in Fontana, one of the oldest in the area. At one time, the West Valley had many egg ranches but the industry has seen business decline during the years.

Upland's sister cities share common bonds

By Suzanne Sproul

Upland businessman Dean Love wants to extend his hand in friendship around the world.

"We are so much alike and we are all striving for the same thing - a good life," Love said.

Although Love wants to help bring the world's people together, he said he realizes the more lasting effects come about through personal contact. That's why he joined the Town Affiliation Association of Upland in 1969.

Love and his wife, June, also had just returned from living in Geneva, Switzerland. He said they were eager to meet new people in other parts of the world.

Love currently is the organization's president. The group has a membership of 76.

"I think one can always learn something from knowing other people," the retired Lockheed employee said.

The local association is a member of the Sister Cities International organization. Upland has maintained a friendly relationship with its sister cities - Caborca, Mexico and Mildura, Australia - since the association was formed in 1968.

Caborca was chosen because the city shared many similarities with Upland - moderate climate, area vineyards and some citrus groves.

Upland and Mildura, however, share a closer relationship. Both cities were founded by George and William Chaffey. Also, the physical appearance of the two also is similar.

For the past 10 years, the Upland association has had a student exchange program with Caborca. Each Memorial Day weekend, area high school students travel to Mexico. Mexican students then return the visit when they travel to Upland each Veteran's Day.

Plans for next month's Veteran's Day program, however, have not yet been made.

The Upland group has continually visited Mildura since 1969. Mildurans also have reciprocated. An Australian contingent traveled to the city to help Upland residents celebrate the city's 75th anniversary in 1981.

The first Upland group introduced an American Thanksgiving in Australia, Love said, and Mildura has been celebrating the traditional affair ever since.

Love said association members had hoped to go to Mildura next month to celebrate Thanksgiving, but the trip was cancelled because a group could not be organized in time.

One of the Sister Cities International organization's theme is to "Help Bring the World Together One Friendship at a Time."

Love believes in that credo.

Next month, however, Upland and Mildura will celebrate a 15-year friendship. Love has planned to send an electronic message by way of a satellite from the Upland Post Office to the one in Mildura.

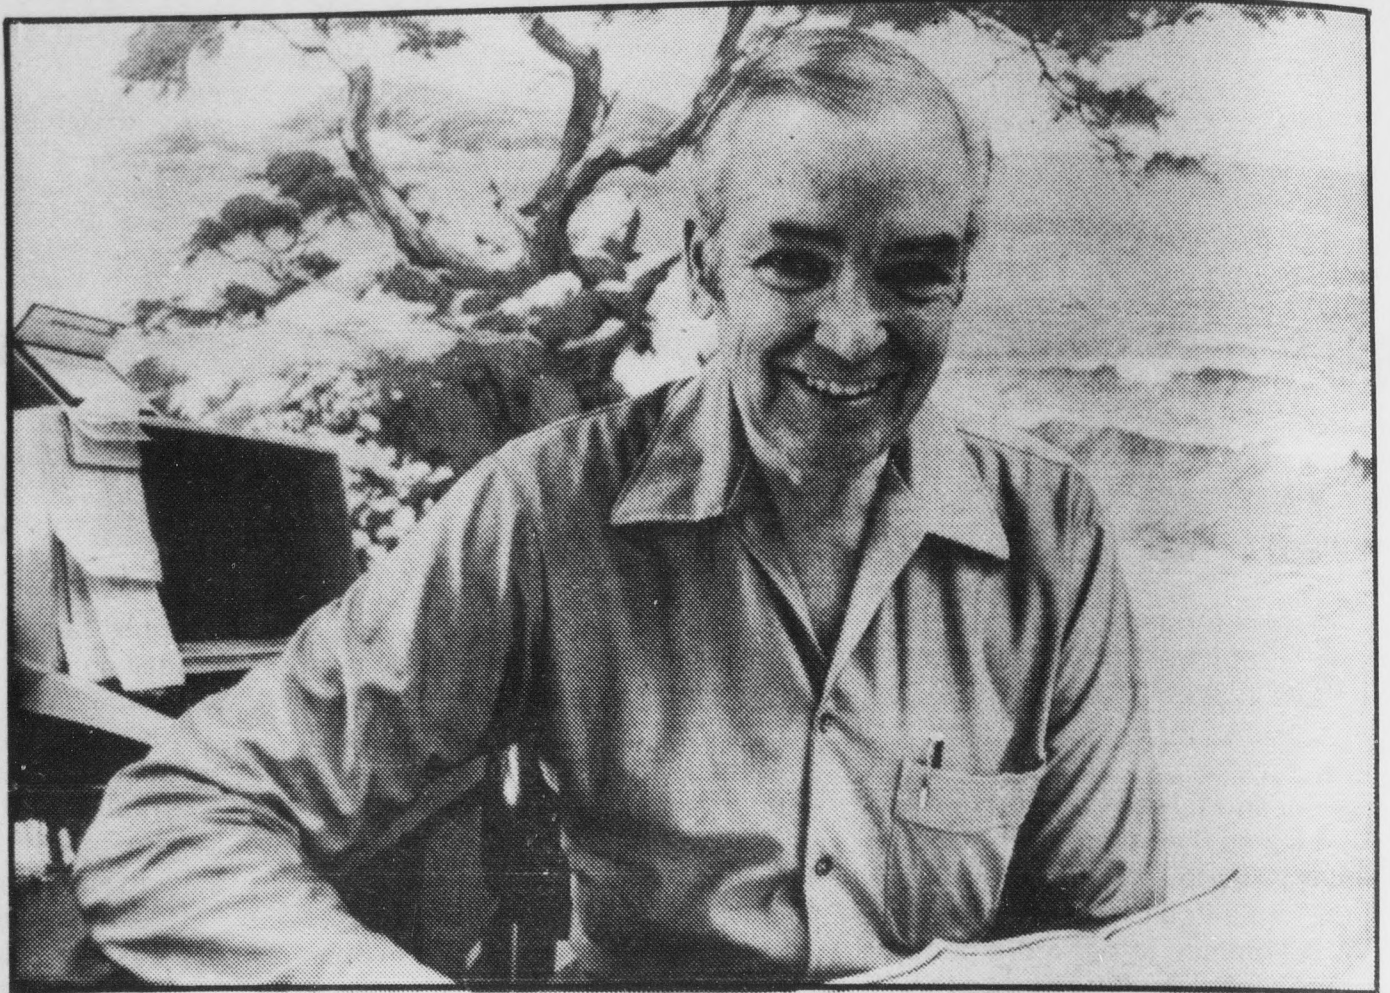

"We wish we could be there but we can't so we're doing the next best thing," he said.

Love and his wife, June, have lived in Upland for almost 30 years. They own the World Travel agency.

"My wife and I, personally, have made a lot of friends and so have many other people here. You have to like people to be an association member," he said.

Eighteen association members recently returned from a Mildura trip. It was Love's first.

"We spent so much time traveling just to get to Mildura and when we did it was raining very heavily," Love said. "We expected that some of our host families would meet us but we were surprised. The entire city council and other city officials and about a total of 80 or 100 people met us.

"It was the warmest feeling one could have. It was just like a family reunion."

Association members were honored at several affairs. They also received gifts.

The association plans to send one or two groups to Mildura next year but it also has long-range plans.

Love said the group has established a student trust fund to send a student to Mildura and to allow a Mildura student to come to Upland.

"If we could get a youth group active, we could send a student there for a school term. If we can join person-to-person, we might be able to change some of the attitudes in the world," Love said. □

"PUMP BUMP"

Bony growths commonly develop on the heel bone because of the foot's biggest enemy, tight shoes. If the heel thrusts out to an exaggerated degree, resultant friction will cause a "pump bump" or bony protrusion. Unrestricted motion of the heel will have the same effect. There should be no pain unless the bump becomes inflamed. Pain is then proportionate to the size of the growth and intensity of the inflammation. Treatment consists primarily of protecting the heel from further rubbing against the shoe. It is accomplished by wearing a larger size shoe equipped with a heel lift to stabilize the foot and accommodate the bump.

A heel spur is distinguished from "pump bump" by its position on the underside of the heel bone.

Lutheran church plans first service

By Terri Tirella

Cross and Crown Lutheran Church is inviting people in the community to attend its first worship service Sunday, Nov. 4, 9 a.m. at Etiwanda High School, 13500 Victoria Ave. in Rancho Cucamonga.

Cross and Crown is a mission church of the American Lutheran Church and is still in the formative stages, according to the Rev. Rick Nelson.

where Cross and Crown can affect lives of people.

He said the church will not attempt to duplicate any services other congregations may offer, but they will support them. "There are established food banks providing outreach ... we're not going to start one but will support those rather than compete with them."

In an effort to get the word out about the first worship service, a distribution of

The high school youth group will go to Denver, Colo. this summer to participate in a week-long national youth conference where about 15,000 young people gather to share their similar faith and values. The event is held every three years.

Nelson said a concentration on "neighborhood stuff," helping members of the congregation to minister in their neighborhoods, may be

The Rev. Rick Nelson

Nelson said he had been looking at constitutions and structures of other congregations to "see what has been working for them."

He has been meeting with the planning committee and studying the area for eight weeks. What shapes the ministry will take will depend upon community and members needs, he said.

"If (there's a) need for ministry to young families or young singles or youth, that is where the focus will be," he said.

The new church will probably present its charter at the ALC spring convention. After gathering a congregation, church officials will think about constructing a building, Nelson said.

He said he and church elders will try to determine 11,000 fliers has begun throughout the area. Church planning members are going door-to-door in their neighborhoods to spread the "good news," Nelson.

"We have found people are very receptive, they are looking for values," he said. People are reaching a time in their lives where soccer, weekend outings, and parties are leaving them with an empty feeling, Nelson said.

"They should try a congregation, any congregation, but try one."

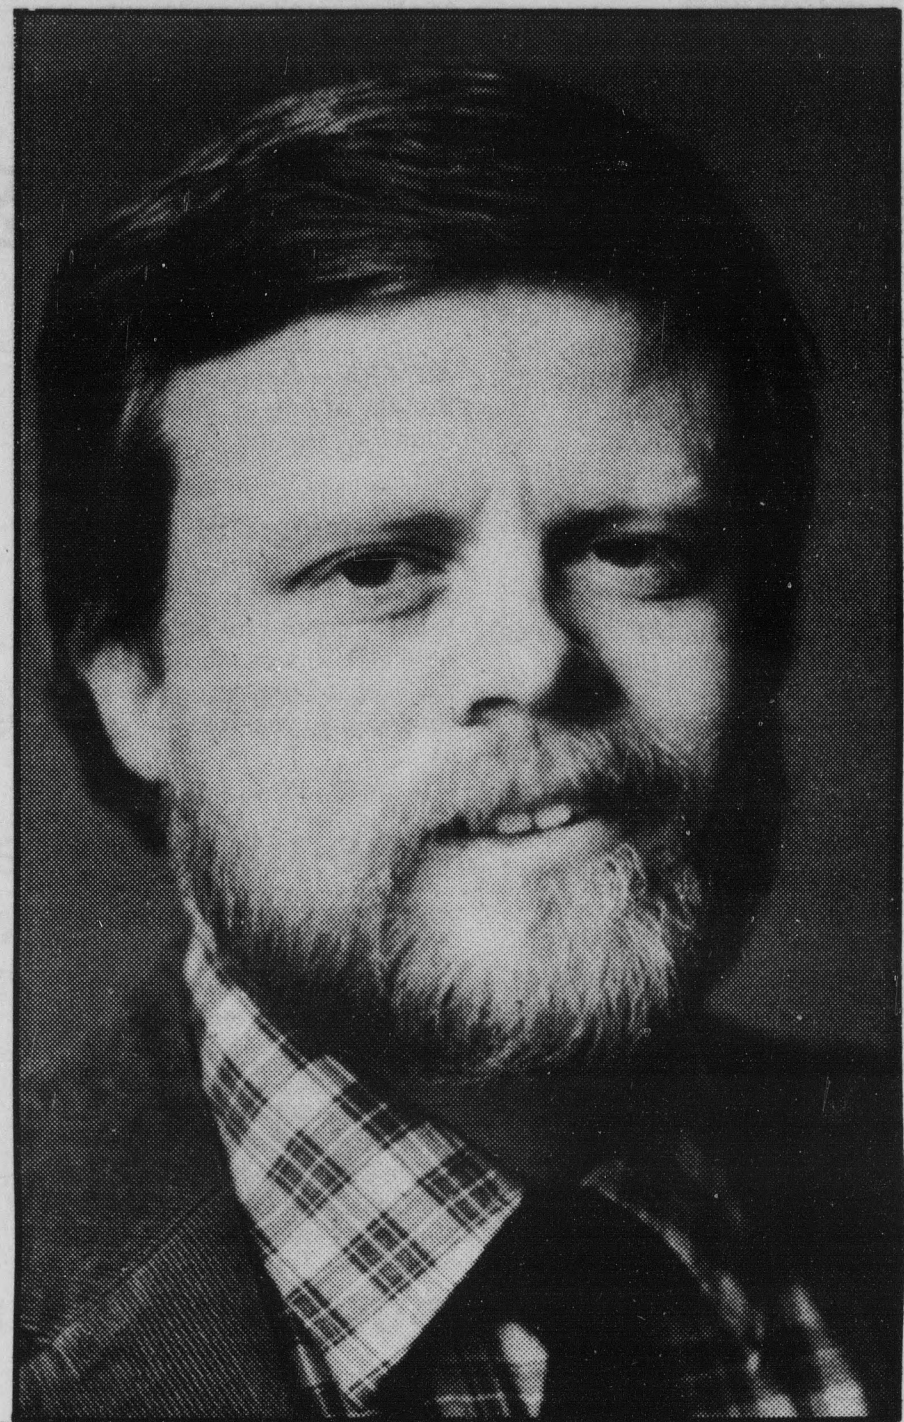

Youth work will be one focus of the new congregation, Nelson said. A former school teacher, he said he feels comfortable on school campuses. "You'll probably be seeing me at football games and track meets."

another direction the new organization is headed. He said a "Love Fund" to help families out during emergencies or telephone networks were also a future possibility.

Worship services rely heavily on the participation of the people. "We're a liturgical church, but that's what liturgical means: works of the people. We have a lot of singing, responsive readings, and a sermon built around the Word," Nelson said. He will play guitar during some of the songs.

"Women of the Spirit" will be the theme of a year-long study group beginning in January. He said classes with available child care will be held in the morning or afternoon and during

Teacher loves the thrill of speed boat racing

By Terri Tirella

Upland Elementary School has a world champion among its teachers' ranks: Jan Christ, a former world class speed boat racer.

Christ, who still holds one of five world speed boat records he and his father set, teaches 28 kindergartners for Upland School District.

The 38-year-old teacher said going to school isn't like work for him. "I enjoy working with the kids and seeing the progress they make."

He said kindergarten students "come in almost knowing nothing and learn everything (about school) in one year."

This is the second kindergarten class for Christ, who previously taught fourth, fifth or sixth grades in Washington for 13 years. He chose to teach kindergartners over sixth graders last year.

"At first I would have said no way I'm going to teach those kids — you have to do everything for them, tie their shoes, wipe their noses and put their coats on before recess," Christ said.

But the children's enthusiasm, their openness and affection won Christ over. He said discipline isn't a problem at the kindergarten level. "They still have respect for authority and have fun at school."

Both of Christ's parents were teachers, in fact, his father taught a Chaffey College when it was located at the current high school site.

He was introduced to speed boat racing when he was in eighth grade. "I've built boats and I've raced throughout the nation, competing coast-to-coast," he said.

The record he still holds is in small outboards, in B-Stock Hydro competition. "It's racing in circles rather than in straight aways."

Christ was a national champion for two years and owned the best boat in his class. But the racing circuit got to be "real hectic and it's tough to compete at that level."

Now he's concentrating on his golf game and getting to know the area. Christ moved from Washington to Claremont in July.

An avid skiing fan, he taught skiing for five years and has joined the Mt. Baldy Ski and Race Club. Both boat racing and skiing worked well with Christ's teaching career.

Teaching and racing share similarities, according to Christ.

"Racing demands perfection to become world-class and, like teaching, requires a lot of preparation and a lot of detail.

"The key to winning is dedication, total commitment to what you want to do. I had to let a lot of other things slip to the side to gain what I wanted, whether it was winning or setting a record," Christ said. □

Fall's the time for a tour of indoor garden

By Patrick Denton
Copley News Service

If you take a careful look at your houseplants at this time you may find that the soil surface in some of the pots appears slightly crusted. You may well find bits of dropped foliage and dried flowers lying on the soil and around the plant containers.

During the fall and winter, I try to build into my weekly routine an inspection tour of all our houseplants. Some sort of regular survey of the indoor plants helps the indoor gardener maintain the plants in a healthy, clean condition.

Here is what I do on my weekly houseplant rounds:

First of all, I pick up any fallen foliage as well as any dried foliage still clinging to the plants. Plants like geraniums seem always shedding and renewing their foliage. Impatiens and some begonias also have this habit. This cleanup is a good disease prevention measure, as dead foliage left lying about, especially on a damp soil surface, invites all sorts of unwelcome molds and fungus problems.

Some plants with long, arching leaves tend from time to time to develop dried, brown leaf tips. This can be from a too-dry atmosphere around the plants or from passing people brushing against the leaves. Spider plants commonly develop this problem. Simply take a pair of sharp scissors and cleanly cut the browned area away. This greatly improves the appearance of the plant.

Next, I take a long nail or a slender table fork and gently stir the soil surface of each plant. I don't dig into the soil at all — this could damage shallow roots. Stirring the surface helps prevent soil compaction, disperses any developing crust and improves water penetration.

The next step is the watering. This, however, is not an automatic part of the weekly routine. Water should be given only when needed.

On my weekly travels through the indoor plants, I water only those whose soil surfaces have dried. When the surface stirring is done, it's easy to see which pots need water. Another sure guide is a finger poked into the soil. Never water soil that is still moist on the surface. More plants are killed by overwatering in late fall and winter than by any

Crime prevention seminar slated

Certain crimes are committed more frequently during the holidays, according to Upland Police Chief Coy Estes.

"Crimes such as armed robbery, shoplifting, the misuse of credit cards and the passing of bad checks increase tremendously during the holidays. This is very costly not only for businesses but for consumers," Estes said.

The Upland Police Department is conducting a holiday crime prevention seminar, Nov. 15, from 7:30 to 9 a.m. at the Astara Auditorium at Arrow Highway and San Antonio Avenue in Upland.

The Upland Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the program. A continental breakfast will be served. Participants will be charged $6 per person. Reservations should be made by Nov. 12 by contacting the chamber at P.O. Box 1369, Upland or by calling 982-8816.

Estes, Detectives Mike McCarthy and Frank Stratton and Agent Dick Noville will represent the police department.

Little more work makes wine a lot better

By Dan Berger
Copley News Service

Sometimes it goes against the better nature of a man to attempt to make a fine wine. Such appears to be the case with Bernard Portet.

Clos du Val is a winery in California's Napa Valley owned by John Goelet, who has vineyard holdings in Australia and South America as well in the United States. And his manager and wine maker for Clos du Val is Portet.

Portet is French by birth, and his father, Andre Portet, was for many years the technical director at Chateau Lafite-Rothchild, one of the finest of Bordeaux producers. The grapes that the elder Portet dealt with annually were Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot. They were the primary varieties that went into the making of Lafite, one of the classic red wines of the world.

And in growing up on the "farm," so to speak, Bernard Portet dealt only with those varieties.

Yet Goelet is a fancier of many fine wines, not the least of which were the great red wines of Burgundy, and he and others who invested in the Clos du Val asked Portet for years to make a Pinot Noir. And for years Portet balked.

It wasn't that Portet disliked Pinot Noir, the great grape of Burgundy. It's just that Burgundy was not in his nature — much the way a 280-pound football lineman views activities such as ballet or gymnastics.

Yet after some time, Portet was persuaded to try his hand at Pinot Noir, and his first effort with the variety, from the 1980 vintage, was a blockbuster. The wine was concentrated in aromas and flavors, but it was almost overpowering, and certainly not a shy, retiring sort of wine.

It was interesting to see how a wine maker unfamiliar with the variety would treat Pinot Noir. But now it is clear that a good Cabernet wine maker can adapt to Pinot Noir, too.

Portet's latest Pinot Noir, the 1982 ($10.75) shows far more finesse and refinement than his 1980, and the wine clearly improves as it is aired — which indicates that the wine will improve with bottle aging, too.

Portet's other wines are, of course, exceptional. He has gained a reputation for great Cabernets, and his 1981 ($12.50) offers more of the style that his backers love. The initial aroma is relatively "closed in" as the experts say, meaning it is not obvious. Yet the balance of the wine is impeccable, and shows that it will age gracefully.

Portet also has released a 1979 Reserve ($25) that is one of the most intensely flavored wines he has ever made. It has a full, chocolatey, currant and plum character that needs at least a decade or two to develop.

Collectors interested in the medallic side of numismatics have a royal treat in store. That's Royal as in Royal Mint of Britain.

Five centuries of unbroken tradition are marked by the issue of a medallic tribute to mark the 500th anniversary of the College of Arms, home of Britain's Heralds.

It was in 1484 that King Richard III, then in the final year of his reign, granted the College of Arms its first Charter of Incorporation. In medieval times heralds served as military staff officers and acted as envoys.

A knowledge of "coats of arms" was essential in order to recognize armor-clad knights on the field of battle — identifiable only by their crests and colors.

The heralds in peacetime organized judging tournaments and jousts and planned the Great Ceremonies of State.

Gradually, with the introduction of professional armies, the military involvement of the heralds diminished, as did their diplomatic duties when resident overseas ambassadors were appointed.

However, civil responsibilities increased. A permanent home became essential and this is what Richard III established 500 years ago.

The College of Arms comprises three Kings of Arms, six Heralds and four Pursuivants. Their ongoing task is the granting and recording of arms.

The medal honoring the College of Arms is being struck in five different versions.

Measuring 2½ inches in diameter, the pure gold version will contain 2½ ounces of the precious metal, reflected in the hefty price tag of $1,250. A solid silver edition containing 4½ ounces of the metal will sell for $120.

Perhaps more in line for the "commoner" — British or U.S. — is a bronze medal available in three versions — gold-plated, silver-plated or just toned bronze. Cost here, respectively, is $49, $39 and $29.

The medal's obverse bears the three-quarters profile of King Richard III based on the contemporary painting in the Royal Collection. The Latin inscription around the circumference translates: RICHARD III, KING OF ENGLAND, FOUNDER OF THE COLLEGE OF ARMS 1484.

The finely detailed reverse displays the College's Armorial Bearings, parts of which may date from shortly after the Battle of Agincourt in 1415. The style is that of heraldic art, which prevailed at the time of King Richard, and the initials N.M., appearing on both sides of the Downtown Upland businesses looking up

Other cities' downtown areas may be suffering the loss of businesses but Upland is holding its own.

Although occasionally there is a vacancy in one of the downtown store fronts, it isn't the norm, according to June Love, Upland Town Center Merchants Association president.

"We're well and happy up here. We're thriving because we have the best and most active organization that we've had for years," Mrs. Love said.

Generations, literally, have shopped at some of the current downtown stores, she said.

Two of the oldest stores, J.J.

Atwoods Co. and the Upland Feed and Fuel Supply, have been familiar businesses to Upland for years. Atwoods recently celebrated its 76th year in business and Upland Feed and Fuel Supply has been a mainstay downtown since 1947.

"I think people want the personalized service the stores downtown give. They just don't get that kind of service normally in the shopping centers," Mrs. Love said.

The merchants association has a membership of 32 and the group always is looking to increase that number, she said.

"Our goal is to have every downtown businessman as an association member," she said.

Association members also sponsor activities to draw customers. The group sponsors an annual chili cookoff, the Christmas children's parade and a holiday open house.

"The downtown is progressing. We think the economy has been very good and we feel it will continue," she said.

"Personal service has kept the downtown businesses alive with all the competition they have," said Tony Malone, Upland Chamber of Commerce executive director.

The occupancy rate of stores is about 95 percent, Malone said.

"I think there are a number of reasons why there aren't too many vacancies," he said. "The association completed a beautification project, there is plenty of parking and the area is well-lighted."

Rents are about half of what businessmen pay in other shopping areas, he said.

"The downtown association also has a direct mail program for its marketing. It always has some promotion going that can compete with the city's 14 shopping centers," Malone said.

Although the 14 centers have sprouted up throughout the city, businessman Ray Stump said he isn't concerned.

"When they started coming I was a bit concerned but not any more. They draw their share but I've seen my business grow," Stump said.

Stump owns Upland Feed and Fuel Supply. He recently opened a branch in the "old town" section of Alta Loma. Business there also is going well.

"I'm optimistic of our survival down here. I think we're alive and healthy," he said.

Nelson said working with the new congregation in Rancho Cucamonga, which brought him here from the San Francisco area, has given him an opportunity to create traditions.

He said in most established congregations, new ministers have to deal with the famous last words "we never did it that way before," a trial that can be very frustrating.

"But we're still a mission church, and there's still that feeling of closeness," he said.

Nelson said the new church's name reflects the ideology of the Lutheran religion "it takes seriously the death and suffering of Christ as a part of His identity with human suffering, as well as with the resurrection."

"We avoid the popular theology that if you get it right with Christ, your life will fall into place," he said. "Or when life is at its worst, they expect Christ to pull them out of a hole. He may not pull you out of the hole, but He jumps in with you, giving strength and providing hope."

Cross and Crown worship services begin at 9 a.m. and nursery care is provided. Education hour for all ages begins at 10:15 a.m. For more information on services, mid-week study or fellowship opportunities, call 989-6710.

Horse lover would rather judge a competition than ride in one

By Terri Tirella

Usually it's those judged, not the judge, who receive ribbons at horse shows, but that wasn't the case for Heather Dunlap.

Heather, 14, did well at the 1984 U.S. National Arabian Championship Youth Judging Contest held in Kentucky last week.

Heather placed second in performance judging and seventh in the overall division, competing with other youths in four-member teams from throughout the nation at the all-day event.

"The kids judged six halter classes, four performance classes, each with four horses," said Cindy Howey, adviser to the team. The competition was for youth age 19 and younger.

Judging began at 8:30 a.m. and lasted until 6 p.m. Competitors set official placings for each horse and then are scored by "carded" Arabian horse judges on how and where they placed the horses. After the initial judging, each competitor had to give oral reasons for two minutes to an official reasons taker.

Heather was a member of the youngest team at the competition and represented the Junior Arabian Horse Association of Southern California. This is the first time a team was sent, Howey said. The team placed eighth out of 13 teams.

Being around animals is nothing new for Heather. She and her parents, Cindee and Dan Dunlap, raise goats, two breeds of dogs as well as breeding Arabian horses.

She's serving her second year as president of Rancho Rebels 4-H Club. She represented the local Arabian horse association, but also served as an alternate to the Region I team at the national competition.

The most difficult part of the competition for Heather was not being able to talk throughout competition day. "I like being able to express my feelings and why I decided where I put them (the horses)," she said. Two judging participants were eliminated because they consulted with one another in the restroom during the competition.

"In the beginning, we had halter (competition) and I was scared ... in reasons, I was shaking," Heather said. It was only her third judging competition and she was the youngest participant to place.

Heather, who has been riding since she was 2 years old, is a regular horse show competitor and has won a number of riding awards. "She practically has a dowry in silver and crystal," her mother said.

Heather has won silver trays, crystal, horse equipment, and ribbons with her riding expertise. She brought back a pewter stallion, a gift certificate for horse supplies and a book on training from the national competition.

Heather's mother enjoys attending horse shows more when Heather is doing judging. "It means we don't have to haul a horse."

"Judging has helped her in school, with her vocabulary, and reasoning (ability)," Cindee said.

In judging competition, Heather must defend why she placed horses in the "reason" division, and the more she can remember about each horse the easier it is for her. Competing youth judges are not allowed to use notes when doing their orals.

Cucamo Catch

Story by Philip Boas

Cucamonga nets: Catching Cod and Criminal

In an old, unmarked warehouse on Haven Avenue in Rancho Cucamonga, fibers are being rapidly weaved into an age-old product that looks much as it did in Biblical times.

But Bill Kirkland, president of West Coast Netting, says the nets produced at his warehouse have evolved, with technology, into products far superior to those tied and casted by ancient fishermen.

In 1982, West Coast Netting weaved a tuna net that stretched more than a mile and weighed 120,000 pounds. The technique used to blend and chemically treat the fibers took six years and $500,000 worth of research to develop. The result: a net that sinks deeper and faster than conventional nets, bringing swift and plentiful catches to tuna fishermen.

The "Cucamonga" net, as it has come to be known in world ports, has proven effective in reducing times for fishing expeditions, said Kirkland. He added that one vessel, the third most productive tuna boat in the world, uses the net to fill its decks with fish in 35 days as opposed to 75 days with conventional netting.

But the tuna industry has diminished in the United States, and Kirkland has taken his net out of the water and on to land, where it is snagging nuclear weapons, hoisting children, capturing criminals and stopping assorted inflated balls.

At the Sandia, New Mexico military testing facility, West Coast netting is strung taut above tanks and troop carriers. Disarmed missiles are dropped from a helicopter, and their heat-seaking sensors zero in on the military vehicles, only to be snagged by the netting before they hit their targets. Such exercises, enable the military to test rocketry without destroying hardware.

At Knotts Berry Farm and Magic Mountain, Kirkland's nets are performing a very different function. Children stroll along meshed bridges and climb on cargo nets, playing out

Barrel bridges, with rope webbing, rock and sway as a young Indiana Jones makes his way over treacherous waters and back into mom and dad's arms.

West Coast Netting has also contributed to the real adventures of NASA's space shuttle program. Kirkland was commended by President Ronald Reagan for his company's non-flammable safety net that protected workers who serviced the shuttle's engines. Also, the company received a NASA high-tech award for developing the sturdy shuttle net from a weak but fireproof fiber.

The Men's and Women's U.S. Olympic Volleyball teams also employed Kirkland's nets to train for their silver and gold performances in the Los Angeles Summer Games.

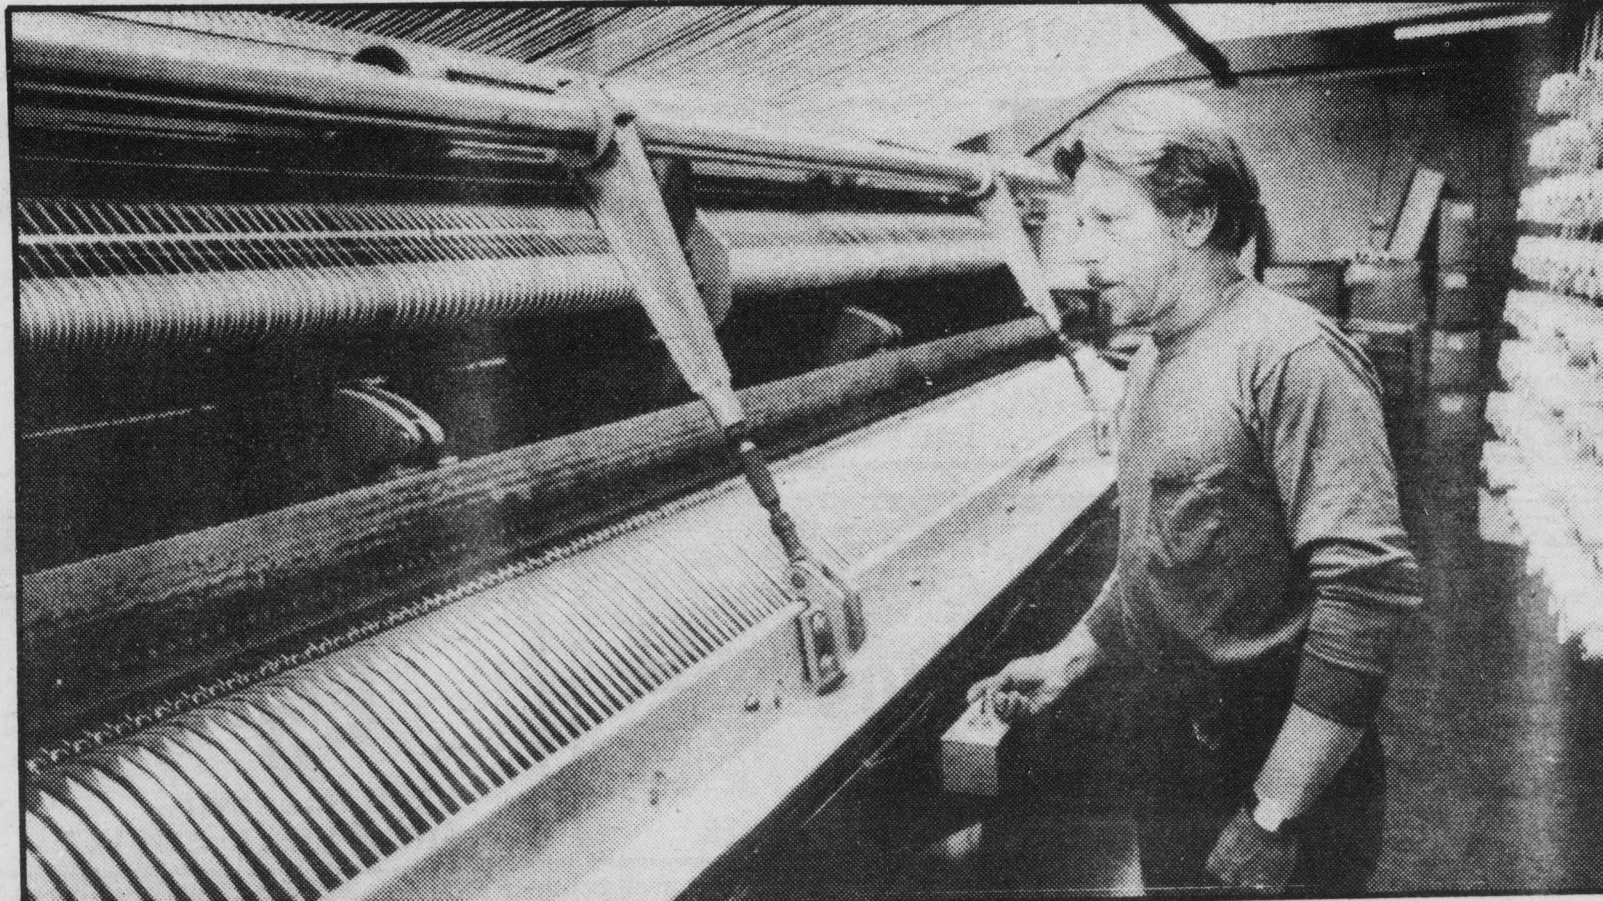

"Our volleyball nets are used by most major schools, and are considered the finest in the world," said Kirkland.

Scotland Yard bobbies and New York City police officers, along with numerous other law enforcement agencies, are using West Coast Netting's "Capture Nets" to apprehend people who turn violent while on drugs, and seek a fight.

In Los Angeles in 1980, a young boy who turned ferocious while on PCP, or "angel dust," was harmlessly subdued by sheriff's deputies who tossed a "Capture Net" over him. The boy's parents thanked officers for "not using a gun," according to news reports.

"The Sheriff of L.A. County asked if we could develop a net to capture people, and assured us that his agency would use it if we could," said Kirkland. West Coast Netting developed the product and today even Ronald's Reagan's secret service men have a "Capture Net" in their arsenal of gadgets. □

Bill Kirkland (left) president of West Coast Netting is snagged while demonstrating the "Capture Net" used by police agencies to ensnare people who turn violent while using drugs. Rolls of filament (top center), similar to dental floss, are twisted to make net fiber. Cory McNeil (center) sews facing on tennis nets. Marvin Leslie (right) starts a loom that ties strands of rope into netting.

Kodak recently sent me two more volumes in their Library of Creative Photography series. The one we're going to explore today is called "How to Catch the Action."

The Olympic Games are still fresh in everyone's memory. All of us who watched television, read sports magazines or followed the Games in the sports pages of a daily newspaper saw thousands of instances where catching the action was the essence of good reportorial coverage. And I'm certain there were thousands of amateur photographers at the Games who were trying to get the same types of pictures the pros were shooting.

Let's see what the Kodak authors have to say:

PETS

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.
Copley News Service

Q. Are dogs still used in the U.S. military services? If so, what are they used for?

My son used to train dogs for the Air Force many years ago. He always talked about the good service the dogs and their handlers provided for our country around the world.

I would be interested in reading about the use of dogs in our modern-day military services.

A. Dogs are still trained and used by the U.S. military services.

In 1952 the first Air Force sentry dog school was opened at Showa Air Station, Japan. A second canine school was begun in 1953 at Wiesbaden, Germany.

In 1958 the responsibility for training military dogs was transferred from the former Army Dog Training Center at Fort Carson, Colo., to what is now the Technical Training Squadron of the Air Force Security Police Academy at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas. The academy trains working dogs for all the U.S. military services and other federal agencies, including the Federal Aviation Administration and the U.S. Secret Service.

The scope of training military dogs has changed since the first dogs entered the services. The training of sentry dogs ended for the Air Force in 1982. Sentry dogs were trained to respond to only one handler. Sentry dogs were trained to be extremely loyal to that handler. During combat, this characteristic was desirable. Because a sentry dog was trained to attack anyone except its handler, its usefulness is severely limited in the modern military.

Today the military trains and uses working dogs. Working dogs are used to sniff out explosives, illegal drugs and contraband as well as for patrol duty and detecting intruders. Training techniques for working military dogs is not all that much different than those used by civilian trainers for personal pets.

At first a close relationship between the handler and dog is established. This is accomplished through a constant close association while feeding, grooming, exercising and playing.

After a close relationship is established, obedience training is begun. Following basic obedience training each dog receives advanced training that includes controlled aggressiveness, attack, tracking, and building and area searches.

Working dogs that demonstrate exceptional curiosity, eagerness and the ability to retrieve are often the dogs that succeed in drug detection programs. A drug detection program was begun in 1971 to combat the increased availability of marijuana and other illegal substances in Southeast Asia. Drug samples enclosed in plastic and glass jars or mixed with other substances can be readily detected by well-trained dogs.

Training for a working military dog is never finished. Dogs that go greater than a month without training often require extensive retraining.

action with a camera is one of photography's greatest pleasures. Wherever there is life, there is action — and photographers need much the same skills to capture the headlong charge of a football player, the leap of a marlin from the sea or the thrill of a child's first bicycle ride. The opportunities are unlimited. ..."

And they continue: "The camera can work miracles — stopping an insect's wing beats or a speeding bullet in the blink of a stroboscopic flash.

"However, action photography is only partly about freezing images to make time stand still. Movement can take many forms, from the explosive energy of a sprint to the drifting rhythms of a dance, and deliberate blurring of an image sometimes better conveys the nature and feeling of action. It shows that good action pictures are more often the result of skill and preparation than of luck."

That last sentence, I feel, needs just a bit of discussion. While I wouldn't disagree for one minute that thorough preparation plays a big part in the success of any photographic venture, in action photography, almost more than any other area, luck is responsible for a lot of visual successes. And while the pros often do spend hours and even days rigging lights and equipment to record a certain event, if the action doesn't take place as it was anticipated, or if the photographer's timing was off by just a fraction of a second, all the preparation just doesn't matter.

I don't know how to assign values fairly between luck and preparation, and I suspect if we were to query 100 pros, we might get as many different answers, so for the sake of trying to avoid an argument, let's just balance the scale at 50 percent preparation and 50 percent good fortune.

But there's still another factor to consider. If a pro is assigned to cover, let's say, a two-day equestrian event — you can be certain he or she will expose a minimum of 15 to 20 rolls of film a day. At 36 exposures per roll, that's 540 to 720 pictures each day — 1,000 to nearly 1,500 for the event. Chances are, with that volume to select from, there are going to be several hundred pretty good images.

Now if you cover a two-day equestrian event, how many rolls of film will you expose? One? Two? Four? The point to all this is that the odds of getting a bunch of good action pictures increases with the volume of your production. While you will probably never run film through your camera the way the pros do, just remember that one of the reasons they expose so much film is to put the odds on getting an award-winning action photo in their favor.

Successful action photography dictates the photographer become master of many skills — from selection of the proper type of equipment, to using the right film, finding a dramatic viewpoint, anticipating peak action, prefocusing, panning and even determining how best to illustrate movement in your pictures.

For some events where the photographers may be a participant — such as mountain climbing — a wide-angle lens may prove to be not only the easiest to use, but also provide some particularly dramatic viewpoints. In other events such as football, for example, most photographers will use lenses in the 300mm to 600mm range in order to reach "into" where the action's taking place.

As for film selection, the controlling factor will have to be the shutter speed needed to stop the action. However, here again, it might not always be desirable to stop the action completely.

Local gymnasts have Olympic fever

By BOB MUIR

Sports is big business, so when America's gymnasts became heroes of the 1984 Los Angeles Summer Olympics and captivated the youth of the nation, gymnastic training facilities waited to capitalize on that success.

They didn't have to wait long.

Instantly, thousands of boys and girls swarmed their local recreation centers and gymnastic facilities with hopes of becoming the Peter Vidmars and Mary Lou Rettons of the next Olympics.

Most facilities were ready for the inevitable gymnastic stampede. But the Southern California Academy of Gymnastics was not.

While children with a new-found interest in gymnastics were seeking a club, the Rancho Cucamonga-based academy hadn't even opened its doors. Now, it's playing catch-up.

"We missed those real strong weeks after the Olympics when people were phoning to find gyms. We were one of the last ones," said Charles Klumpp, main instructor and general partner of the Southern California Academy of Gymnastics.

"We're now getting the overspill of people who didn't get into a program and are calling us because we have the openings."

The gymnastic academy, which opened in Ontario in 1981, moved to its present location in July. However, the doors didn't open until construction on the 7,500 square foot building was completed in September.

"We wanted to get into a larger facility. The area of this facility gives you the room to do a lot of things. We now have the room so that we can hold a gymnastic contest and not bump into each other," said Klumpp about the new facility, a mile from the old gym and 1,500 square feet larger.

Situated in a business park at 9635 Turner Ave., the academy has the size and dimensions of a warehouse. Filled with a large floor exercising mat and numerous balance beams, uneven bars and vaults, the gymnastic school has plenty of room. And Klumpp plans to use it.

"We're trying to become a well-rounded gym," said Klumpp. "One of the most important things is that we're going to be equipped for the kids from the kinder-gymnast to the league-trained gymnast."

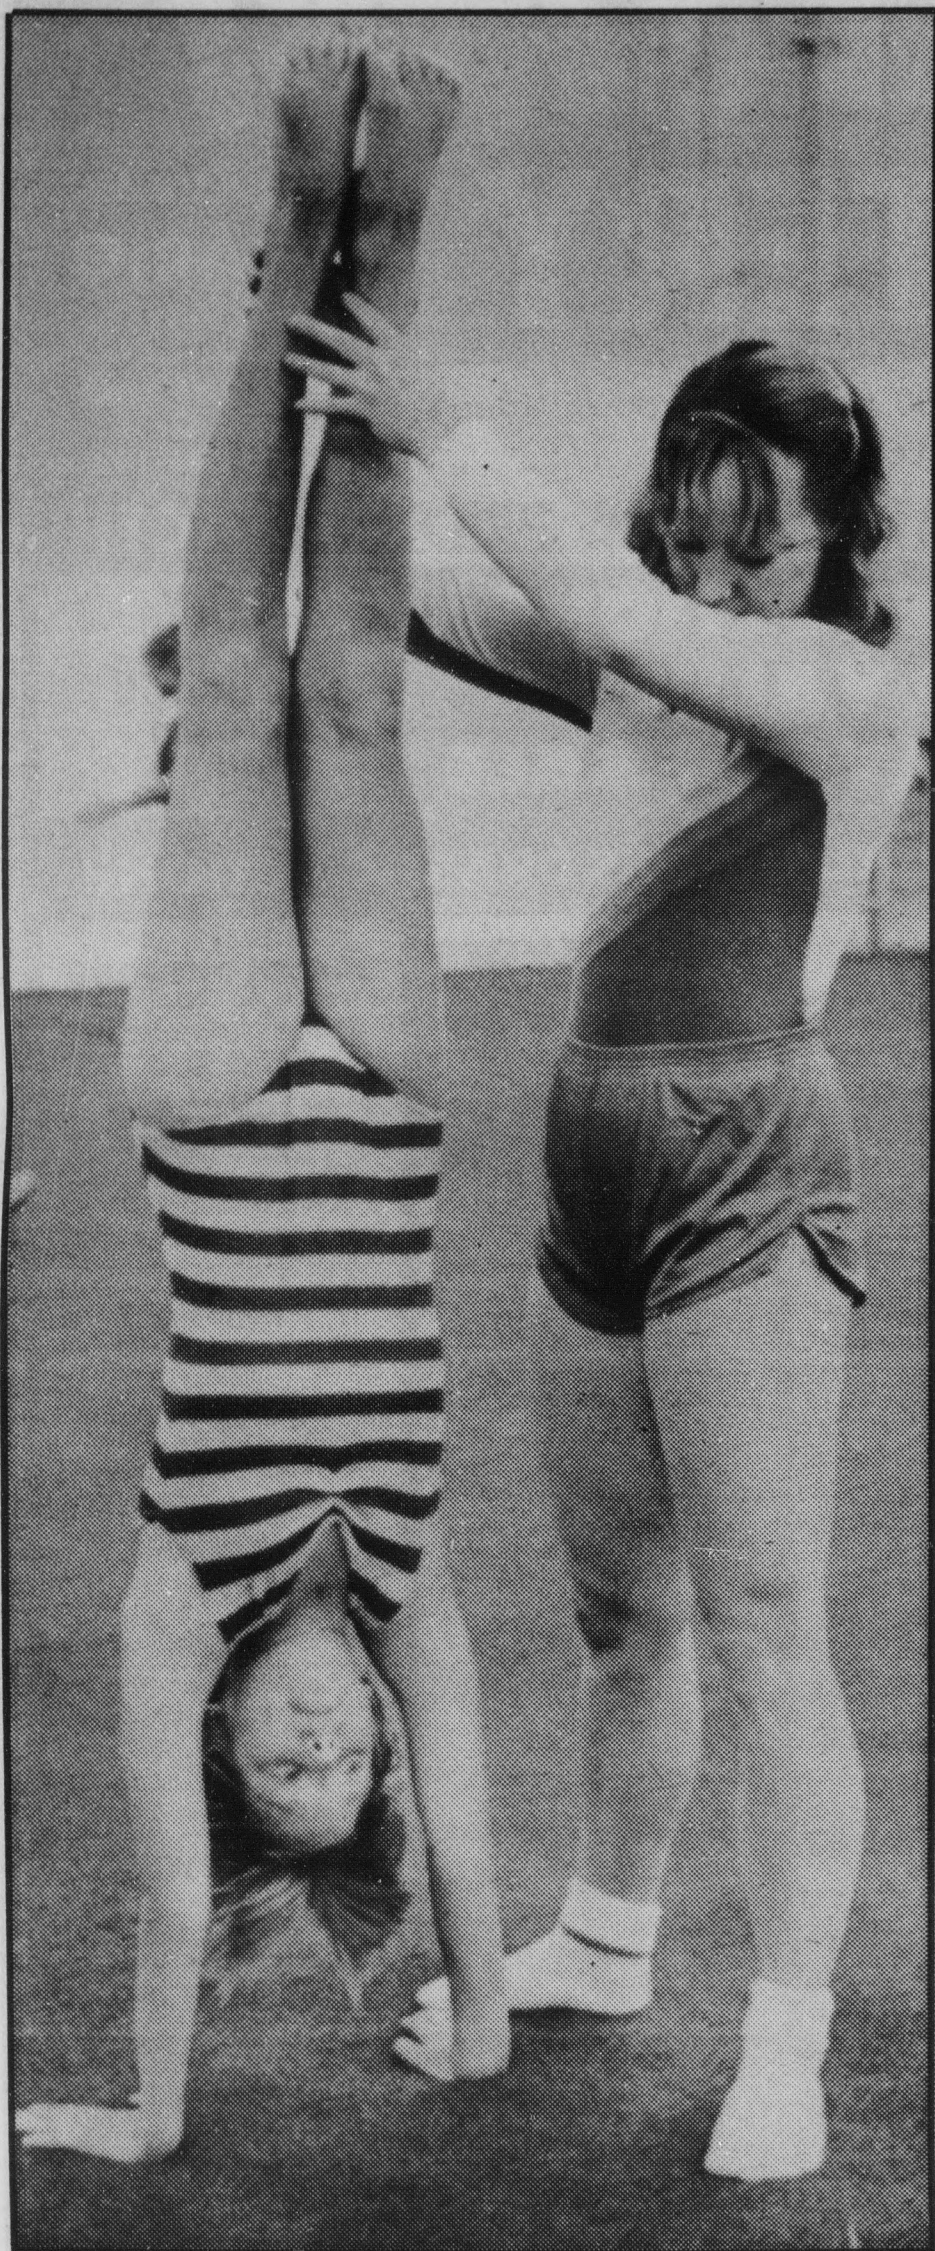

So far, the plans have paid dividends. Since opening about a month ago, over 140 children have joined the academy.

"Most of your gyms and recreational programs don't have openings, they have waiting lists. We're growing everyday," said Klumpp, adding that the facility had about 100 openings for new students.

The academy plans to add six more classes to its program, which can provide educational gymnastic services to up to 240 children.

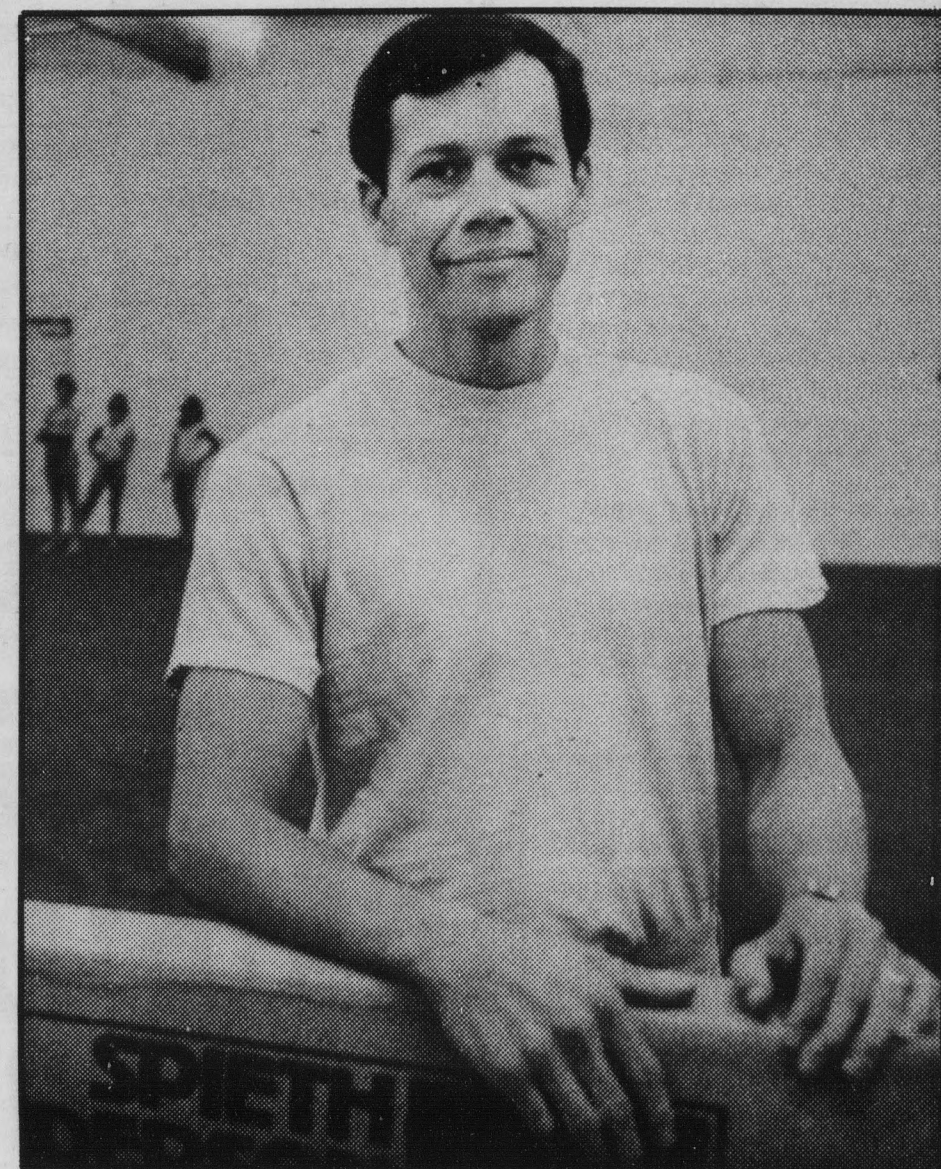

Currently, the school has 22 morning and afternoon classes offered six days a week, except Sunday. Costs range from $16 to $35 a month for the different talent levels and age groups.

Additional plans call for the academy to install a kinder-gym program for 3- to 5-year-old children in December.

"Most of the equipment now in other gyms is for bigger kids; the big bars, the big beam and all of the other things," cited Klumpp. "We want to have more of a mini-gym where everything is scaled down and is more adaptable for the younger students."

Adults are becoming involved in the gymnastic movement, too. Last week, the academy opened a adult gymnastics class for those wanting to experiment or reacquaint themselves with the sport.

The academy also have girls' competitive gymnastic teams. Presently, the academy has a Class III team, which competes in the compulsory exercises only. Next year, Klumpp wants to expand to the competitive program to include a Class I team, which competes in compulsory and optional exercises, and possibly an elite gymnast operation to train the athletes.

Elite gymnasts are talented enough to tryout for the U.S. team.

"What we see is that we have a lot of youngsters from 7 to 10 years old with tremendous potential. What we're trying to do is develop from our own feeder program," Klumpp noted.

The main goal Klumpp wants to accomplish is introduction to gymnastics for children, while learning something about themselves mentally and physically.

"If kids can enjoy what they're doing and build some good values like self-worth, self-confidence and the ability to learn to cooperate in a training situation, it's worth it," stated Klumpp.

"It's an overall conditioning that they're going to strengthen. Most of our girls that have taken the

When it comes to gymnastics, Klumpp knows what he's talking about.

He was an All-American at the University of Utah in 1965-66 before coaching the men's team at Cal Poly Pomona and directing the Upland recreational program from 1974 to 1976. In the process, he has coached over 30 All-Americans, gymnasts rated in the top six in the nation in at least one event.

Klumpp and his five instructor staff use the positive coaching technique to get their gymnastic points across to the students.

"I think we first have to be aware of the age group we're working with and make sure it is positive experience for the youngster," he said. "The youngsters have to please themselves first. They have to be satisfied.

"When I look into their eyes and see that bubbly reliance they have, I get excited," he admitted. "Their enthusiasm is contagious."

COINS

By Gary L. Palmer
Copley News Service

The U.S. Mint has several offerings for collectors, not the least of which is 1984 Uncirculated Coin Sets. We talked of the planned return of these popular collector coins a month or so ago, but now they are reality.

Priced at $7, the '84 sets represent the first uncirculated sets offered by the Mint since 1981.

The set contains 10 coins — cent, nickel, dime, quarter and half dollar from both the Denver and Philadelphia mints, along with specially designed identification pieces featuring the U.S. Mint seal on the reverse and the letter "P" or "D" on the obverse to denote where the Silver medalist to talk at service

An Olympic silver medalist will speak at Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church's monthly youth service, Sunday at 7 p.m.

Terry Schroeder, captain of the silver medal-winning U.S. water polo team, is a member of Emanuel Lutheran Church in Santa Barbara and is studying at Palmer College in Sunnyvale. Schroeder graduated with honors from Santa Barbara's San Marcos High School and magna cum laude from Pepperdine University. While at Pepperdine, he was named to the All-American water polo team four times, leading the nation three years in scoring goals and with the most assists. As a sophomore he was invited to try out for the national team, and in 1978 was named to the team.

Schroeder will share his personal philosophy with the junior, senior and post-high school singles at the meeting.

The community is invited to attend. For more information call 989-6500.

Store caters to needs of babies

New baby furniture and clothing available by catalog and direct purchase is now available to area residents at the recently opened Small World store, 419-B Central Ave., in Upland.

Owner Marilyn Smith said the store will be open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and during November and December will also be open on Saturdays.

Small World's inventory includes a large selection of baby clothes in sizes 0-14 and baby furniture by manufacturers like Bassett and Welsh.

Smith opened Small World after spending the last 18 years raising her three children, and has also been involved as a foster parent to 39 other children.

coins are minted.

Mint Director Donna Pope said there is no limit to the number of sets a customer can order.

The coins are packaged in soft plastic and come with a presentation folder briefly detailing the history of each coin.

A nice Christmas gift, perhaps, to start some young collector on a lifetime trip with numismatics.

Customers can order by writing to:

United States Mint,
Uncirculated Coin Set Program,
55 Mint St., San Francisco, CA 94175.

All orders must be accompanied by full payment — personal check, money order or cashier's check — made payable to U.S. Mint. The $7 per set cost includes all shipping charges.

Pope also announced that one-and-five-sixteenth-inch miniature bronze replicas of the medals authorized by Congress to commemorate Americans — civilian and military — missing in action in Southeast Asia are also available.

Designer of the medals was a Vietnam veteran, Thomas Nielsen of Woodbridge, Va., whose Navy service included two tours in the war-torn country.

Obverse of the medal depicts an eagle in a bamboo forest. Around the top border appears the lettering "MISSING WHILE SERVING IN THE DEFENSE OF FREEDOM IN SOUTHEAST ASIA." At the bottom border are the well-known abbreviations for "prisoners of war" and "missing in action" — POW-MIA.

The reverse features the Vietnam Service Medal symbolically lying on a surface ready for the recipient to claim it. The inscription "YOU ARE NOT FORGOTTEN" appears in the upper left field and "BY ACT OF CONGRESS SEPTEMBER 1983" is in the lower right portion of the medal.

The lettering "HONORING AMERICANS STILL MISSING" appears around the top border and the year 1961 (first missing POW/MIA) appears on the left border with the year 1973 (year cease-fire began) on the right border. "VIETNAM-LAOS-CAMBODIA" appears at the lower border.

Cost of these remembrance medals is $2 at U.S. mint locations or $2.25 if ordered by mail.

Seventh grade English students study for the "English Cup."

Students get nudge to better their English

English teachers at Cucamonga Junior High in Rancho Cucamonga are appealing to their students' competitive spirits to try to get them to work harder in the subject.

Teachers Pat Decker, Darlene Rich, Lynn Ashcraft, Jaimie LaPointe and Lydia Miner have introduced the quarterly English Cup competition in hopes of spurring better student performance. Seventh- and eighth-grade English classes are competing in spelling and in the timely turning in of assignments to vie for the prestigious English Cup trophy for a quarter.

"Motivation, that's the key word," said Decker, an eighth-grade team teacher.

Getting seventh- and eighth-grade students to turn in assignments is often difficult, said Decker, who team teaches with Rich.

Eighth graders frequently become lax in doing their English work and neglect to turn in their assignments, said Decker.

The idea of injecting competition into the study of English resulted from a brainstorming session the teachers had with principal Dave Soden. The teachers met with Soden to express their desire to do something to turn the students on to English.

"It was Dave's idea," said Ashcraft, English Department chairwoman who team teaches seventh graders.

"They (the students) seem to be real excited about the idea. They're excited about the opportunity to prove themselves because eighth graders always think they're better," she said.

Ashcraft said she has noticed in the classes she and LaPointe teach together that students are turning in more assignments and the work is of better quality.

"They're taking some pride. It's nice to see," she noted.

Decker said she and co-teacher Rich have noticed the eighth graders are doing better work in spelling.

"They know the seventh graders will never see the trophy. We'll see. Time will tell," she said.

After the purchase of the trophy, Ashcraft took the trophy to all English classes and explained the competition.

The competition period has begun and will extend through Nov. 9. The day after the deadline, the two grade level performances will be averaged and a winner declared.

Before the competition, Rich said she and Decker noticed some students turned in no class work. Now, more work is being turned in.

The quarterly English Cup competition will start again the next quarter, with grammar added to spelling and turning in of assignments. Composition skills will be added to the competition the quarter after that. □

Students are taking the "English Cup" competition seriously and Mark Hurley, eighth grader, takes some time get in a little extra study time.

"they sold!"

We hear those words a lot in the Classified department. They come from the many advertisers...people like you...who have been successful in selling the articles they've advertised in the Classified section of this newspaper. There just doesn't seem to be a better way to get quick results when you have something for sale than with these well-read little ads. And it costs so little too! The next time you have something for sale, give us a call and we'll help you word your ad for sure response!

What's Wrong With Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday?

There's nothing wrong with these days...they are all days of the week which will find the people in our community turning to the Classified pages of this paper in search of a job, a place to live or for some particular item they want to buy or sell.

Because you, as an advertiser, cannot know when a particular need will develop in someone else's life, it is important that your advertising messages appear each day until you achieve the results you want.
